Explicit Literacy Teaching

Explicit teaching is a recognised part of a teacher’s professional practice that optimises student’s learning. It involves three main steps: modeling the skill for your students, guiding them through practice with feedback, and then letting them try it on their own – “I Do, We Do, You Do” As students continue to consolidate their knowledge, they’ll gradually need less feedback, helping them solidify these skills in their long-term memory.

This type of instruction breaks down skills into smaller, manageable steps, making it easier for students to master them. In a well-implemented explicit instruction lesson, you’ll see students actively engaged and participating.

Research has shown that explicit and structured Literacy teaching has outperformed other methods and is a tried-and-true approach that delivers results. Explicit Literacy teaching optimises student’s learning!

We have curated a selection of resources to support this approach – with a focus on Phonemic Awareness, Phonics, Fluency, Vocabulary & Comprehension.
