Joy Allcock M.Ed
 Joy Allcock has spent the last 20 years applying the problem-solving skills she learned as an occupational therapist to finding ways to improve literacy outcomes for students.

Joy has a Master of Education degree and has written a range of resources for teachers and students which explain how the code of English works. She has built a bridge between research and practice, ensuring that teachers have access to evidence-based resources that achieve a greater impact on student learning. Joy also provides professional development for teachers throughout NZ and internationally.

Joy has led several research projects, working with teachers to improve literacy success for all children. The Shine Project (www.literacysuccess.org.nz) is the latest of these. Catch up Your Code was written for older students in the Shine schools, using the approach for teaching alphabetic code knowledge (The Code is the Key) that was so successful with junior students.

Catch Up Your Code

Catch Up Your Code is an evidence-based teaching resource, designed to identify and fill gaps in students' knowledge of the alphabetic code in English. Written by acclaimed New Zealand literacy expert Joy Allcock, Catch Up Your Code contains assessment materials for identifying gaps in code knowledge and a series of 10-minute lessons that provide a fast and effective way of catching up this knowledge.

Catch Up Your Code is a must-have teaching tool for all Year 4 to Year 8 teachers and teachers of English or ELT in high school or adult learning environments. This easy-to-implement, evidence-based approach has been proven to achieve an exceptional impact on student learning for both whole class and Tier 2 & 3 students. Foreword by Professor John Hattie.
