Create welcoming, comfortable spaces

Creating a comfortable and welcoming environment is key for engaging children in learning. Try using soft furnishings such as cushions, floor rugs and child sized furniture to create pleasant and cosy spaces. It is also important to allow areas for quiet learning, and for when children need some time alone.

Create collaborative, learning spaces

Flexible learning environments encourage collaborative learning and team work. These spaces can be easily created by using larger tables or grouping smaller tables together. Try to include different types of seating such as chairs and stools, as well as seating at different heights such as poufs and cushions. Using tables at different heights allows children not only to sit on a conventional chair, but to stand, kneel or sit on the floor. This variety of seating choices helps to encourage agency in learning.

Create flexible, multifunctional spaces

Any learning environment can be easily changed and adapted to different pedagogical requirements by using multifunctional furniture. Try using open storage units which can divide up large spaces. Furniture on castors also allows for easy manoeuvrability and quick changes in learning spaces. Flexible learning environments requires furniture to be functional as well as adaptable.

What is a flexible learning space?

- Children are given a choice in their learning space
- Encourages collaborative work, communication and critical thinking
- Allows for smaller, quiet spaces which support independent learning
- Educators can create spaces in collaboration with children which will support learning
- Design which complements current pedagogy and the mix of educator directed and child led learning

Possible benefits include

- Improved engagement of children
- Increase in participation
- Increase in communication and team work
- Allows children to have more access to their educators and support staff
- Empowerment of children as they understand their style of learning

Tips for flexible spaces

- Include different types of seating at different heights (lying on the floor, kneeling, conventional seating and standing)
- Include tables at different heights
- Use multi-purpose and/or mobile storage and furniture
- Group tables together or use larger tables to encourage collaborative work
- Move large items such as lounges, storage units and tables to create smaller learning areas for specific activities
